FROM THE NAVIGATOR

Last night we rounded Punta Maisi, the eastern most point of Cuba and entered the Old Bahama Channel. This area is the deepest stretch of water lying between the north coast of Cuba and the Shallows of the Great Bahama Bank. Throughout the day we will follow a northwesterly course along the north-eastern coast of Cuba. We expect to clear the Channel at approximately 10:00pm this evening and head northerly in order to make our final run up through the Florida Straits. We expect to embark our pilot around 4:45am and be alongside by 6:00am.
